

Uncertain corona times, deleted text messages, and frustrated mink breeders

Exactly that was the pivotal point of the case back in 2021 that the Danish-Parliament appointed, Mink Commission, was supposed to try to get to the bottom of.

Specifically, on April 23, 2021, the Mink Commission began its work towards getting to the bottom of the case and drawing a conclusion. At Stibo Complete, we have not been involved in the specific case work, but we have been responsible for printing and delivering the commission's final report on 30 June 2022.

A smooth process

Printed matters for the Danish Parliament are not unfamiliar to us. It is always a very smooth process and actually also a quite simple one. To start with, we receive a Word file from the Danish Parliament, which we set up with proper layout and design ready for approval. Once everything is approved, the material is printed, completed and delivered.

The Mink Commission's report was one of the larger printed matters. In total, we ended up with 550 copies of 4,800 pages spanning over 9 volumes.

If you are curious and want to delve more into the case, you can find the entire report as a PDF on the Danish Parliament's website right here (in Danish).
