

Print publication brings Futures Studies to the world

Stibo Complete has been responsible for the printing, wrapping and packaging of FARSIGHT magazine since 2022, an English-language quarterly publication published in Europe, North America and Asia.

FARSIGHT is published by the Copenhagen Institute for Futures Studies, an independent and non-profit think tank with half a century of experience in using Futures Studies to address the biggest challenges facing organisations and society.

FARSIGHT is often the first encounter that potential business partners or customers have with the Institute, and therefore, the ambitions and requirements for the quality of content, design expression, and print and paper quality are high.

A task that Stibo Complete manages to fulfil in every publication, allowing the Copenhagen Institute for Futures Studies to focus on their important work while we take care of printing, deadlines and packaging for them.

The Copenhagen Institute for Futures Studies has been publishing international print publications since 2010, and we have worked with many different printers in Denmark over the years. We experience a high degree of flexibility and reliability with Stibo Complete, something that gives us peace of mind every time we need to send a new publication to print.

Casper Skovgaard Petersen
Head of Publishing

What is FARSIGHT?

With FARSIGHT, the Institute explores possible futures to provoke action in the present, and each issue features analyses by the Institute's futurologists, as well as articles and interviews from an international team of freelance journalists and experts. It provides an in-depth and multifaceted insight into topics relevant to a wide range of readers and decision-makers – including the city of the future, technology, mobility, artificial intelligence, nature and sustainability, health and geopolitics.

